

Cultivating a Daily Revolution offered every Quarter
2 Hour Gatherings | Location Varies

Friends of the Community
Agroecology Network

Enroll in FoCAN's 2-unit Cultivating a Daily Revolution (CDR) internship this quarter!

This internship is a student-based & facilitated program designed to engage, provide experience, and educate participating students in themes of gender, economics, and social justice issues within our food and commodity chains. We meet weekly for two hours. Location varies quarterly but in the past, we have held our weekly gatherings either in the Kresge Seminar Room or in the Village A2. We do our best to pick a time we can all attend for class activities, discussion, and a Guest Speaker Series. Guest lecturers will present on their work in the area of social justice and food systems. For the community building aspect of the internship, a meal will be prepared and enjoyed during class time. For the service learning portion of the CDR internship, students will be working weekly with one of three selected organizations:

Program in Community and Agroecology (PICA)

<https://pica.ucsc.edu/>

FoCAN/Community Agroecology Network (CAN)

<https://canunite.org/>

Project Pollinate

<http://www.projectpollinate.org/>

Enrollment capacity: 8-10 interns

60 hours/intern

~6hrs/wk: 2hr class, 1hr reading, 3hr service-learning

Permission codes handed out on the first day of class*

- ❖ Email us at focan@ucsc.edu if you are interested in taking the internship
- ❖ If you don't receive a response soon, contact the current CDR coordinator who's email can be found on our Weebly > About Us > Our Team
- ❖ Friends of the Community AgroEcology Network (FoCAN) is an on-campus student organization that promotes campus and communal involvement in food awareness, social justice, fair trade, agroecological approaches, and more.
